

AIAA Sydney Section International Astronautical Congress Scholarship

The International Astronautical Congress (IAC) is the biggest annual technical space conference around the world, and this year it is coming to Australia. IAC 2017 will be hosted in Adelaide, South Australia from the 25th to 29th September 2017.

The IAC presents an incredible opportunity for undergraduate students on many levels: to learn about the international space industry, to observe the trends of where the industry is going, to meet the leaders driving it forward, to see what research is being done and to network with peers and mentors. There is no better way to start to build one's pathway into the space industry.

The Scholarship

To support students in attending IAC, the AIAA Sydney Section will be offering a limited number of scholarships to help cover expenses (flights, accommodation, and registration). There are four scholarships in total:

1. 1 x Scholarship at: $550
2. 3 x Scholarships at $350

Scholarship Requirements

As part of the program, recipients are required to be active in sharing their experiences with the wider AIAA community, including activities such as:

- Writing an article on the event after attending to be posted on the AIAA website
- Giving a presentation to local student groups after the event on your experiences
- Social media posts during the event through AIAA (Facebook, twitter)

Application

Applications are through a series of short answer questions on the google form here:

<https://goo.gl/forms/8NdB2TWjWnlvkYRs2>

We are looking for people who can show that they are going to make the most of the experience, and that it will be very beneficial to their future plans.

Applications are due by 10pm Sunday 4th June. Scholarship recipients will be notified by Sunday 11th June.

If you have any questions, please send them to aiaa.sydneysection@gmail.com

Kind regards,
